The annual awards, focused on results, includes the Nigerian ad for Martell, 'Be the standout swift', which clinched second place

Hot off the press is Kantar's Creative Effectiveness Awards, which recognise the most impactful ads of last year, as judged by consumers across the world. Throughout 2021, Kantar's Link creative testing platform was used to evaluate more than 13,000 TV, digital, print and outdoor ads in 75 markets. The awards celebrate those that were most impactful in building brands, driving sales and increasing long-term equity. As well as recognising the best creative work of the year, the awards showcase the "creative sparks" – the common themes which set apart the most effective ads, and underline some of the key market trends influencing advertising in 2021.

Nigerian star Davido uses emotion to bring Martell's brand story to life and engage audiences

"The ad brings to life Martell's brand purpose – standing out from the crowd by redefining convention – and celebrates those who pave their own path for the benefit of many. That's the foundation of our global platform, Be the Standout Swift. This advert was specifically created for the Nigerian market; it is deeply anchored in local culture, featuring Davido, a local talent whose own ethos, 'we rise by lifting others', mirrors our brand purpose of a Standout Swift. Our goal was to generate awareness and create an emotional attachment to our brand, by expressing what we stand for. We have had fantastic results, including a significant shift in spontaneous awareness of the brand and increased share of online conversation,” comments Richard Black, global marketing director, Martell.

An accelerated shift to digital

Advertisers increased their advertising and media investments in 2021, as lockdown restrictions in many markets started to ease. There was further investment in digital platforms, with digital ad spend growing by 30.5%, compared with 19.2% overall, and more media channels became digitalised.

“These dynamic trends create significant opportunities for new types of creative expression in advertising, both online and offline. Channel fragmentation means a greater need to understand ad effectiveness than ever. The integration of behavioural science techniques, better automation, and faster, more granular insights mean creative testing should be part of every team’s development cycle,” commented Jane Ostler, EVP, creative and media solutions, Kantar. “And of course, the universal principles still hold true; when you combine clear marketing objectives with brilliantly executed creative, we see effectiveness in action.”

How can you get the best return from your TV advertising?

Winning ads reveal the 'creative sparks' to ignite effectiveness

Across the 13,000+ adverts analysed using Link, Kantar's validated ad testing solution, Kantar identified five 'creative sparks' that set the most effective executions apart:

#1 - Ad breaks go social

The winning TV ads in this year's awards demonstrate a clear move towards infusing direct references to digital environments and themes. This could be a deliberate attempt to acknowledge the existence of online platforms, which many of us are immersed in for hours each day. Including visual cues from the digital world undoubtedly makes TV ads more compelling and more absorbing to watch.

In eighth place in the top 10 TV ads of the year, Chupa Chups XXL Flavour Playlist TV spot is one example of this trend in action. Jordi Rosell, senior brand manager, Perfetti Van Melle, said: "We are delighted to have our work recognised by Kantar. Our goal was to use the launch of our new product as an opportunity to extend the brand's reach and relevance among young adults. One of the key things we wanted to capture was the independence, assertiveness, and rebellious spirit of young people. The creative approach was designed to break with tradition, using references to TikTok, gaming and other cultural touchpoints in a way that reflects their lives, while giving prominence to the unique features of the product."

#2 - Every second counts

With winning ads ranging from six to 136 seconds long, the awards show you can effectively tell a story at any ad length. While digital ads are often short to reflect our online attention span, one of the winners in the digital category is a two minutes and 15 seconds long ad for Colombian beer brand BBC, which uses an unusual and distinct graphic style soundtracked by a jazz track that draws viewers in.

#3 - Global campaigns, local heroes

Many brands want to build a consistent perception amongst viewers globally, but local understanding is key to creative choices that are effective and support the global brand vision. Diageo brand Johnnie Walker scooped awards for ads in the UK, Mexico and Thailand with effective local executions which contribute to a consistent global strategy.

#4 - Show, don't tell

Even with the myriad of new developments and sophisticated ways to stretch creative boundaries with advancements in visual and audio techniques, our winning ads show that the product demo is still as effective as ever.

In first place in the TV category, Mitre 10's "With you all the way" spot is a stand-out example of a product demo that is natural and maintains the flow of the ad. Jules Lloyd-Jones, chief marketing officer, Mitre 10, commented: "With you all the way" is a promise of partnership. We're there to help our customers build confidence in their ability to get the job done right. With a touch of humour thrown in, the ad creative reflects that promise and centres on our greatest asset – our people. Leaning into that differentiator, the aim was to take us from retailer to trusted project partner for our customers, really inspiring them to love where they live, work and play. We're so pleased the ad has landed so well with Kiwi customers and we're honoured to see the campaign recognised internationally in the Creative Effectiveness Awards."

#5 - Make them smile

Laughter has long been a staple in advertising. But the last 20 years have seen a steady decline in the use of humour as a result of the purpose-based marketing boom, and as brands looked to communicate sensitively during the pandemic. Recent analysis from Kantar shows that humour is a powerful tool in creating ads which are expressive, involving and distinct. Award winners from Rappi, Zespri, Amazon and Chromebook show that bringing humour back into advertising pays off.

#BizTrends2022: Culture, tech, social; shifts and new growth intersections in Africa

Ndeye Diagne, Kantar 19 Jan 2022

Commenting on the win for Martell Nigeria, Ndeye Diagne, managing director, West Africa, Insights Division, Kantar adds, “I’m incredibly inspired by Martell’s ad, not only because it’s beautifully executed but also by the extent to which it rigorously applies the new power values that drive and inspire African consumers: success is the only option; resilience is African; and inspiration comes from within – that’s the power of local. The ad brings it all together, riding on all that propels Africa forward, which also feature as ingredients of local celebrity Davido’s success. The ad is a magnificent, powerful illustration of the narrative that African people are resolutely writing for the continent and in the world – that’s the essence of #AfricaLife.”
